Character biography:

A written statement of the entire life of a character as perceived by the actor. Character biographies are, of course, drawn from the text but may sometimes be extended to a time before the play begins to the birth of the character or to a time after the play ends to the character's death. In such cases, the actor's projections of the origin and destiny of the character are based on the text or on valid decisions made by the actor and the director.
